Next to the default site is a site I call Temple Square. A busy crossroad dominated by traffic during day time, which together with the lack of shadow pushes the gathering people toward the house walls. Which is seen as the dotted marks in the diagram. There are lot of dwelling areas in the surroundings and Temple Square is a natural meeting point for the people living there; there are a lot of things happening there, it has a chaat-shop, it has a small market, restaurants, shops etc. It has a lot of qualities, but the main issue is the traffic and the sun! Which is clearly to be seen at the evenings, when it’s barely any traffic passing and the sun is down - that’s when the people occupy the space.

To attract people to my space, I will create a shortway for the people to avoid the busy crossroad, and also make a pathway beside the road. I will make a meeting place, where no traffic is passing and where it’s a nice cool climate. The services offered by the shops at Temple Square will still be needed, but to all of the people in Dharavi I’ll give a new social meeting point. And above all, a place also to be used by women. A place for women and men to meet. A place where everybody is considered as equals.
